

Viewing Terms

A Practical Glossary
for Film and TV Study

BRIAN MOON

chalkface

First published in Australia 2004

Chalkface Press P/L
PO Box 23
Cottesloe WA 6011
AUSTRALIA

© Brian Moon [text] and Chalkface Press

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, recording or otherwise, without the prior permission of the copyright owners.

For authorised copying please ensure that your institution has a licence from the relevant Copyright Licencing Agency. This allows you to copy small parts of the text in limited numbers only. This, however, does not include the quoted extracts or images: permission to copy any of the extracts or images should be sought from individual copyright holders.

Edited: Bronwyn Mellor
Cover design: Ken Bull, Lodestone Pty Ltd Layout: Stephen Mellor

The National Library of Australia Cataloguing-in-Publication data:

Moon, Brian, 1958- .

Viewing terms : a practical glossary for film and tv study.

Bibliography.

Includes index.

For upper secondary and tertiary students.

ISBN 1 875136 22 3.

1. Motion picture industry - Terminology.

2. Television - Terminology. I. Title.

791.4303

Set in Clearface and ITC Kabel
Printed in Western Australia by Lamb Print, Perth, WA 6000

Introduction

We live in a visual culture. From film and television to billboards, magazines and websites, we spend our days immersed in a sea of images and icons. The ability to decode, enjoy and evaluate visual messages is central to our daily lives. In our schools and colleges, viewing is now, quite properly, a part of the core curriculum. It takes its place alongside reading as a fundamental literacy skill.

This book is concerned with exploring one aspect of our viewing experience: the world of film and television texts. No longer confined to specialist media courses, film and TV texts are now a part of mainstream study in English, literature and cultural studies programs. As most teachers are aware, students come to such texts with great enthusiasm and a wealth of viewing experience. But the study of film and TV texts nevertheless can be challenging. One reason for difficulty, ironically, is our collective virtuosity at reading particular visual texts. Our sophistication as viewers has enabled modern film-makers and television producers to create texts that appear almost seamless. The difficulties arise when we try to explain what it is that we do to make sense of such complex tapestries.

A second cause of difficulty is that our skill as viewers is nevertheless quite narrow. Hollywood blockbusters and prime time police dramas use a limited range of film codes and styles with which we have become thoroughly familiar. Faced with something different – an early film by Eisenstein or Murnau, or a modern Bollywood musical – we are likely to find we are struggling to comprehend. Serious film study confronts us with the same challenges as serious study of literature: the need to understand not only the texts that surround us day to day but also those that preceded them; the need to make comparisons across time and culture; the need to view familiar texts from unfamiliar perspectives. Engaging with film and television texts in this way calls for different kinds of knowledge: about social and historical contexts, about the evolution of film codes and technologies, about viewing practices – and these can be challenging areas of study. Compounding their difficulty is the often complex language of screen studies, which contains a great many specialised terms.

Viewing Terms aims to help teachers and students cope with this complex terminology, and with the task of developing a broader perspective on film and television texts. It addresses a selection of key terms and concepts and makes them accessible through explanations and activities. The goal is to help students develop more sophisticated understandings of the structure and operation of screen texts – to help them acquire concepts and skills, not just a vocabulary. With this in mind, most terms have been treated under carefully chosen headings rather than listed as isolated definitions. The key entries relate to cornerstone concepts in study, such as mis-en-scène, montage, suture, the gaze, and refer to theoretical frameworks such as auteur theory, semiotics and spectator theory. Also included as major entries is a selection of more general critical concepts such as narrative, gender and desire. Specific technical terms, such as tilt, pan, dolly, are treated within the context of these entries. In addition, a Quick Reference section provides brief definitions of terms and concepts, such as Foley artist, gaffer, and grip. By organising information in this way, the book provides a context for the terminology readers are acquiring.

Introduction

Viewing Terms aims also to historicise the study of film and television. It does this in two ways. First, by building historical detail into its explanations and examples, so that readers gain an understanding of the connections between technology, economics, culture and aesthetics in film and television. And second, by foregrounding the evolution of viewership, through the concept of viewing practices. The emphasis on viewing as a practice reflects a belief that we cannot claim to know how texts work and what effects they have in a culture without investigating the ways in which – and the conditions under which – they are actually viewed by audiences. Throughout the book, the concepts of viewing practices and audience are deployed as reference points against which purely theoretical claims must be tested. This move is very much in line with contemporary developments in film theory, where cognitive and empirical approaches now supplement the semiotic and psychoanalytic models that prevailed in previous decades.

While a certain amount of technical information is provided, Viewing Terms focuses mainly on the reading and analysis of film and TV. It does not aim to teach production techniques. In spite of this focus on analysis, the book aims to avoid leveraging screen texts into a general ‘literary’ model of textual criticism. This book’s goal is to help the student learn to read screen texts on their own terms and not as variations on familiar literary forms. Teachers should also note that although the book covers concepts in both film and television, the focus on television is limited to narrative genres and TV movies, which have much in common with the textual forms and practices of film. Other important television genres and functions, such as news and current affairs, reality TV, game shows and the like, cannot be fully explored in a book of this scope, though they are mentioned in passing in a number of entries.

I hope that teachers and students will find Viewing Terms a useful reference, and one that helps make their study of film and TV texts more purposeful and more rewarding.

Brian Moon

Topic maps

These headings do not cover all of the terms in the book. Teachers and students may wish to add to the list under each heading, or develop their own charts for other topics to explore.

Topic	Key entries
The elements and 'grammar' of screen texts:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Sign Codes & conventions Shot Camera angle Camera distance <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Camera movement Mise en scène Montage Point of view Editing
Film form and genre	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Narrative Mise en scène Montage <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Editing Genre
Viewing practices and audience	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Audience Viewing practices Gaze <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Suture Ideology Feminist theory
Cinema aesthetics	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Realism Expressionism Lighting <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Mise en scène Theme Values
Technical aspects of production	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Shot Mise-en-scène Editing Directing <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Lighting Camera distance Camera movement
Political / ideological dimensions	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Ideology Subjectivity Gender Suture <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Apparatus theory Feminist theory Postcolonial theory
Film theory	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Film theory Auteur theory Structuralism & poststructuralism Apparatus theory Audience/spectator theory <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Feminist theory Psychoanalytic theory Postcolonial theory Gender/queer theory

Index of main entries

Bold CAPITALS refer to main entry headings.

Terms in lower case are treated under the relevant main entry.

APPARATUS THEORY	1	CAMERA MOVEMENT	25
ideology, apparatus theory	1	pan	26
subjectivity, apparatus theory	1	dolly	26
suture, apparatus theory	2	track	26
		tilt	26
		zoom	27
AUDIENCE	6	CODES AND CONVENTIONS	30
spectator theory	7	sign (and code)	30 target audience	7	camera code	32
viewers, and audience	7	lighting code	32 historical audience	8	editing code	32
real audience	8	performance code	32
projected audience	8	sound code	32
imagined audience	8	narrative code	32
ideology, and audience	8	genre (and code)	33
AUTEUR THEORY	11	DIRECTOR, DIRECTING	37
director	11	first cut	38
French new wave	11	final cut	38
		director's cut	38
CAMERA ANGLE	15	DOCUMENTARY	42
eye level camera	15	actuality, in documentary	43
high angle	16	voice-over, in documentary	43
low angle	16	interview, in documentary	43
bird's eye	16	file footage, in documentary	43
canted camera	16	captioning, in documentary	43
		re-enactment, in documentary	43
CAMERA DISTANCE	20	graphics, in documentary	43
proxemic code	20	cinema verite	44 extreme close-up	21	direct address, in documentary	44 detail shot	21	drama documentary	44
close-up shot	21	docu-drama	44
medium shot	21
two shot	21	EDITOR, EDITING	48
long shot	21	dailies	49
extreme long shot	21	rushes	49
focus	22	rough cut	49
depth of field	22
deep focus	22
shallow focus	22

Index of main entries

fine cut	49	GENRE	81
negative matching	49	Film genres:	85
establishment shot	49	action	85
cutting for continuity	49	fantasy	85
cross-cutting	49	film noir	85
parallel editing	49	historical drama	85
cutting on action	50	horror	86
extended frame	50	melodrama	86
fast cutting	50	musical	86
		romance	86
EXPRESSIONISM	54	science fiction	87 formalism	55	war	87
surrealism	55	western	87
film noir, and expressionism	55	TV formats:	88
		cooking	88
FEMINIST THEORY	60	courtroom drama	88
patriarchy	60	game show	88
phallocentrism	61	home and garden	89
gaze, in feminist theory	61	medical drama	89
		music video	89
FILM THEORY	65	news	89
auteur theory	68	police drama	89
apparatus theory	68	situation comedy	90
cognitive theory	68	soap opera	90
feminist theory	68	sports	90
Marxist theory	68
poststructuralism	69	IDEOLOGY	92
postcolonial theory	69	news, and ideology	92 psychoanalytic theory	69	naturalisation	92
queer theory	69	middle class ideology	93
structuralism	69	desire, and ideology	93
		myth	93
GAZE	72	capitalism, ideology	94
fantasy, and gaze	73	socialism, ideology	94 point of view shot, and gaze	73	game show, and ideology	94 reverse shot, and gaze	73
		INTERTEXTUALITY	97
GENDER	76	codes, and intertext	98
sex-gender system	76	narrative, and intertext	98
queer theory	77	genre, and intertext	99
masculine/feminine	77
desire, and gender	77	LIGHTING	102
identification, gender	77	director of photography	102

Index of main entries

three point lighting	103	third cinema	132
fill lighting	103	PSYCHOANALYTIC THEORY	135
high key lighting	104	unconscious	135
low key lighting	104	desire	136
back lighting	104	scopophilia	136
side lighting	104	lack	136
spot lighting	104	identification	137
chiaroscuro lighting	104
MISE EN SCENE	108	REALISM	140
montage, and mise en scène	108	deep focus, and realism	140 framing	109	bourgeois realism	141
closed / open frame	109	social realism	141 space and staging	110
composition	110	SHOT	144
light, and mise en scène	110	purpose	144 narrative, and mise en scène	111	establishing shot	144 realism, and mise en scène	111	close up shot	144 symbol, and mise en scène	111	detail shot	144 values, and mise en scène	111	properties of shot	144 sequence, shots in	145
		transitions, shot	145
		content curve	145
		desire, deferred	146
		hypersignification	146
MONTAGE	117
grammar	117	SIGN	151
cross cutting	117	activation of signs	151
jump cut	117	semiotics	151
narrative montage	118	signifier	151
ideational montage	118	signified	151
		Kuleshov effect	152
		polysemy	152
		iconic sign	153
		indexical sign	153
		symbolic sign	153
NARRATIVE	123
narrator, camera as	124	STRUCTURALISM & cause and effect, in narrative	124	POSTSTRUCTURALISM	155 reliable narrator	124	binary opposition	155
unreliable narrator	124	function, in narrative	156 closed narrative	125	subject, in narrative	156
open narrative	125	object, in narrative	156
POINT OF VIEW	127
point of view shot	127
point of view, and gaze	128
POSTCOLONIAL THEORY	131
Other	132
alienation, and colonialism	132

Index of main entries

donor, in narrative	156	THEME	167
receiver, in narrative	156	values, and theme	168
helper, in narrative	156	VALUES	172
opponent, in narrative	156	Hays Code	173
poststructuralism	157	Motion Picture Production Code	173 difference	157	classification	173
trace	157	ensorship	173
SUBJECTIVITY	160	MPAA film rating	174
identity	160	film ratings	174
subject position	161	VIEWING PRACTICES	177
cinema, and subjectivity	161	values, and viewing practices	178
SUTURE	164	rules of viewing	179
reverse shot	165	narrative viewing practice	179 point of view shot	165	ffective viewing practice	179 subjective camera	165	moral viewing practice	179
absent field	165	aesthetic viewing practice	179
objective camera	165	political viewing practice	179
gaze	165
desire	165		